Dr. Victor Goldbloom at the Political Science Association last Friday, defending the Liberal Party's record in office. The talk was ostensibly on Bill 22.

Bill 22 to stand, says Goldbloom

By Shaun Lovejoy

In a lecture sponsored by the Political Science Association last Friday, Dr. Victor Goldbloom, Minister for Environmental and Municipal Affairs, defended the Liberal Party's position on Bill 22. In a brief historical introduction, Dr. Goldbloom described the separation of English and French-speaking groups as "an accident of history", attributing this separation to their respective dominance of different economic sectors. He characterized English domination of industry as the result of the British background of commercial experience, contrasting this to what he viewed as the rural agricultural background of French Canadians.

Shifting to the twentieth century, Goldbloom turned his attention to the evolution of the educational system over the last 20 years. He remarked how the elitist/non-elitist dichotomy among Quebec's educational institutions diminished during the Quiet Revolution. Goldbloom hypothesized that this led to a "new-found upward mobility" which brought Francophones for the first time onto the boards of directors of various corporations. It was this new economic position therefore which raised the entire language question anew.

The Liberal cabinet minister then described Bill 22 as a "social-psychological phenomenon". As such, he argued, it would not be "realistic to expect its repeal". Dr. Goldbloom saw the question as one of "collective rights vs. individual rights," or the preservation of French culture against the individual right to speak English. His "fundamental message" was that "if we can't hold Quebec together, then we can't hold Canada together". He further asserted that it was important to bring people "who are separately inclined" around to supporting federalism.

In a question and answer period following the talk, Goldbloom hotly contested charges of corruption and mismanagement against the Liberal government. He explained that the Liberals were calling an election before the end of their mandate because "they wanted to deal with the labour problem", and were afraid that the economic situation would be no better two years from now. The early election was thus needed to give the party the chance it needed to deal with the problem without fearing electoral intervention.

McGill maintenance union receives strike mandate

By Larry Tansey

McGill maintenance workers, members of Local 298 (FTQ) have voted overwhelmingly to give their Executive a mandate to strike, the decision coming at a meeting held yesterday to discuss the union's proposal on the McGill Pension Plan. The pension plan is the only issue which remains unsettled in the current negotiations.

The union has put forward three basic demands on the question of the Pension Plan. The first is that the pension plan should be made voluntary. At present the pension plan is compulsory for all employees 30 years of age and older. The union is demanding that all employees currently in the pension plan and future employees be given the right to decide whether they want membership in the pension plan or not. Secondly, the union demands that for those who decide to withdraw from the pension plan, money they have paid in, plus that which the Administration has contributed, should be contributed directly or transferred to another pension plan of the workers' own choosing. Under the present pension plan both the workers and the Administration contribute a certain percentage of money to the pension fund. Thirdly, those workers who choose not to participate in the pension plan should be allowed to keep the percentage which was previously deducted from their paycheque plus that amount which the Administration was contributing to the pension plan.

All workers present except one voted to support these proposals.

While the workers have given their executive a mandate to strike, no final date will be set until all attempts to reach a negotiated settlement have failed. The union negotiators are going to ask that the Administration extend the deadline for settlement of the pension plan.

As it now stands, if no agreement is reached by December 31, 1976, the current pension plan will simply remain in effect. The union wants this deadline to be extended so that negotiations can continue. However, if the University refuses to extend this deadline, then there is almost certain to be a strike. Up to now negotiations on the pension plan have been delayed because both the Government and the Administration have refused to provide any answers to the workers concerning the pension plan.

In other matters addressed at the meeting, an unsigned bulletin which was circulated among the workers was strongly criticized by a union rep. The bulletin claimed that in direct violation of a collective agreement, McGill workers were being underpaid compared to workers at the Université de Montréal. The union rep stated that the bulletin contained several errors and that it did not properly match up the salaries with job descriptions. He explained that while workers at both universities may have the same job titles, the work they do is of a different nature and thus they receive different salaries. However, he did say that workers were in certain cases being underpaid and that negotiations were now under way with the administration to rectify this situation.

Constitution plan draws flak on Senate veto, Daily

By Justin Loughry

Members of the Committee to Restructure the Students' Society (CRSS) clashed with the handful of students present at Friday's Constitution debate over the University Senate's veto power over Students' Society decisions, and over the fate of the McGill Daily under the Majority Report's recommendations. Discussion also focused on the process of impeachment of Students' Society-elected officials under the Majority Report's constitution.

Denouncing the Minority's Report's intention to remove from Senate veto power over Students' Society decisions, Roger Balk, representing the Majority Report, insisted that "There is no way that Senate is not going to exercise a veto". Rev. Balk asserted that since the University is the agency for collecting the fees that fund Students' Society operations, it is "statutorily responsible" to oversee the disbursement of those monies.

Balk's remarks provoked protest from several of those present. One student drew an analogy between the union check-off which management enforces to ensure that labour unions receive their members' dues, and the University's inclusion of the student's activity fee under registration requirements. Remarking that management has no say in how a union spends its revenues, the student questioned why the University should maintain its influence on Students' Society decisions through the veto prerogative of Senate.

Another student seized upon the Majority Report's maintenance of the Senate veto to attack the CRSS for "serving the interests of the Administration" rather than of students.

The Majority Report's treatment of the impeachment of Students' Society executives also elicited some criticism. Under the majority proposal, the Student Executive is chosen from among the Students' Council, which is composed of representatives from the various faculty constituencies and student associations. To remove a member of the student executive, two avenues are available: a vote of the Students' Council, or a vote from that representative's constituency. One student at the meeting Friday argued that it was unlikely that Students' Council would remove an executive that it had elected, and that a faculty association whose representative had ascended to the executive would find it absurd to remove their own member from such a position of power.

Open letter:

The following Joint Statement was a result of the "One Day Symposium on Fee Hike for Foreign Students" held on August 21st, 1976 at Hart House Debate Room, University of Toronto. The undersigned Chinese Students' Associations fully support this Joint Statement.

The text of the Joint Statement:-

As a result of the tuition fee hike, there will be a numerical redistribution of foreign students in favour of those from well-to-do families, especially those from developed countries. This aggravates the situation that foreign students are increasingly accepted more on the basis of their financial capacity, and much less on their academic and personal qualities.

a. Academic excellence would be affected, especially among graduate departments where foreign students have a relatively higher percentage.

b. Cultural interchange is often regarded as an integral part of modern university education. Consequently, it would be regrettable if Canadian students are deprived of the chance to meet and interact with foreign students of different backgrounds.

The present fee increase will apply to foreign students already in Canada who change their programs on or after January 1977. The higher tuition fee will seriously disrupt their study plans.

This fee hike has been accompanied by an unjustified campaign on foreign students who are pinpointed as being responsible for shortage of university places and burden on the taxpayer; this may promote tension between Canadian and foreign students. Foreign students have been used as scapegoats to divert the public attention on the economic and social problems.

The fee hike will only save the Ontario Government $2 million this year and $6 million next year (Toronto Star, 5th May, 1976). It is almost insignificant when compared with the 1975-1976 Ontario Government deficit of $1,889 million. The undesirable consequences that it has created far outweighed any possible benefits.

We feel this 260 percent fee hike, together with admission quotas in university faculties, represent a growing trend to discourage foreign students from seeking higher education in this country. This is regrettable because Canada is not only skirting her moral responsibility toward helping other countries but in fact militating against the international trend toward narrowing the educational gap between countries.

We strongly oppose the decision made by the Ontario Minister of Colleges and Universities and attempts by any other provincial governments to increase tuition fees for foreign students.

We earnestly urge the Ontario Government to rescind its decision.

Daily Oracle says:

Redmen for first; more balanced league

By Richard C. Jablonski

According to the collected wisdom of the Quebec University Athletic Association's basketball coaches, there is only one thing that basketball fans can rely upon during the upcoming season: "league balance". Five schools (hopefully) will field hoop teams for the 1976-77 schedule: McGill, Concordia, Bishop's, UQTR, and Laval. However, with the current strike at Laval threatening that institution's athletic program, not even this basic fact is a certainty.

In general, this season represents a turning point for college basketball in the Province of Quebec. McGill coach Butch Staples readily admits that this year's Redmen are the best players he has thus far handled at McGill. The few spectators who actually do follow McGill basketball on a regular basis have grown weary of such statements. It is time for the Redmen to produce a championship, or find someone who can.

Doug Daigneault's coaching record at Loyola-Concordia speaks for itself, but the Stinger coach faces a number of question marks in the form of graduated starters. Concordia won it all last year. This year will be tougher.

Gaiter revival?

At Bishop's, Garth Smith is attempting to instill some of the qualities of his late sixties Gaiter hoop teams into the 1976 version of the team. The coach hopes that his players perform up to the standards established by the beautiful new athletic complex on the Lennoxville campus, one of the better facilities in the league.

The coach of Trois Rivières, Paul Thibaudeau, enters his second year as head man of the Patriotes with the same old problem - no big man.

This season, however, Thibaudeau has a genuine star to throw at the rest of the league. Never a pushover, the Patriotes are capable of surprising some people.

At this juncture, the Rouge et Or of Laval University will surprise opposition teams merely by showing up for the games.

And so, the question inevitably crops up: who is going to win? What follows is a combined scouting report and prognostication based primarily upon interviews with the various coaches and spectator oracles around the league. Keep in mind that this same system was employed in the selection of the Yankees over the Reds in six games and the Rangers to win their first Stanley Cup since????

McGill

If Redman coach Butch Staples is looking happier these days, it is probably because his team is definitely in the running for the QUAA championship this season. Two years ago, when Staples inherited his current position from Sam Wimisner, the Redman basketball program was in a shambles. Through patient rebuilding and recruiting however, Staples has turned McGill's basketball fortunes around to the point where the Redmen (along with Concordia) must be considered as being primary contenders for QUAA supremacy. For testimony to the strength of the McGill squad, just ask any member of the Queen's, Ottawa, or Carleton University teams, all of whom the Redmen have soundly defeated in preseason play.

Most championship calibre basketball teams revolve around a dominant center, and Staples has found a good one in the person of 6'9" Charlie Galbraith, an American import from King's College in Pennsylvania. Galbraith can do it all, and is a potential team leader in three critical categories: scoring, rebounding, and shot blocking.

McGill's other four starters figure to be Rollie Brisset and Gordie Brabant in the backcourt, and Joey Farroba and Bill Holt up front. Brisset, the only starter who played on last year's team, is an exceptional dribbler and a flashy passer. He is also a questionable shooter and a liability on defense. Having Galbraith behind him clogging up the middle should tend to steady Rollie's defensive game, however, and observers are looking for him to have his best season ever.

Brisset's backcourtmate Brabant, a graduate of John Abbott, is a steady ballplayer who took up basketball at the urging of Concordia coach Daigneault. Gordie does many little things well, and promises to be an asset for McGill. Four-year vet Dave Kassie and import Kevin O'Neill give depth to the guard position.

The old and the new

The frontcourt should be yet another source of delight for Staples, featuring, as it does, something old in Bill Holt and something new in Joey Farroba. At 6'3", Holt, due to his aggressive style of play and long arms, plays as though he is 6'5". Although he's only 6'1", Farroba rebounds extremely well. Add this to his shooting ability, steady ballhandling, solid defense, and court sense, and you can see why Farroba was named Boston State's most valuable player in his senior year at that school. Look for him to fill in at guard as well—it is his natural position.

Rounding out the frontcourt are Jim Gallogly, Gerry Ostroff, Art McMillan, Jim Vanderaa, and Jeff Sahimerdan. Gallogly and Ostroff, both starters last year, figure to see quite a bit of playing time. Either one is capable when he's on his game, but each is hampered by problems of his own creation. Gallogly has a poor reputation with the league's referees, and inasmuch does not benefit from good officiating. Ostroff is somewhat of an enigma; a player with good physical equipment who is plagued by inconsistency. Should Holt falter at all, or should Farroba move to the backcourt on a starting basis, either Gallogly or Ostroff will start in the emptied slot. Regardless, Staples needs strong seasons from these two if Redmen nonetheless concedes the fact that this is basically a "rebuilding" year for his Stingers.

Two former All-Canadians, forward Ron Puskarich (6'4") and guard John Erglis, return for yet another season of QUAA play and give Daigneault a solid foundation for his rebuilding efforts. In Puskarich and Erglis, Daigneault possesses a smooth-playing, high-scoring forward, and a playmaking guard of some repute. Other Stinger returnees include center Doug Merlin (who for

Akin, whom he describes as "an excellent ballplayer and an excellent person". As well as playing college ball at Wesleyan, Akin has put in some time in the rugged basketball leagues of Europe, so fans can expect him to be a fairly physical and experienced performer—the type of ballplayer the Stingers will need to offset the height advantage of Redman center Galbraith.

Filling out Concordia's lineup will be a host of Canadians, including forwards Doug Hayward and Bruce Webb, swingman Jeff Boyle, and guard Bruce Collins. Figure on the 6'0" Collins to start along with Erglis in the Stinger backcourt, and that two of the forward positions will be manned by Puskarich and Akin. The remaining forward slot is still open.

Daigneault is very high on this aggregation, but then he should be. Without regard to their talents, any combination of these players will provide the coach with much better depth than the empty seats which comprised last year's Stinger bench.

Concordia looks like a second place team, but McGill should nonetheless be acutely aware of the Stingers. On a one game basis, this team could easily defeat the Redmen on a given night.

Bishop's

Any resemblance between last year's Bishop's team and most other university level basketball squads was purely coincidental. In fact, the Gaiters would have been hard-pressed to defeat the champions of McGill's open intramural b-ball league. It was rumored around the QUAA that Gaiter coach Garth Smith had become addicted to Roloids, and spelled relief: P-L-A-Y-E-R-S. Well Gaiter fans, relief is here, coming in the form of CEGEP graduates, an American import, and a holdover or two. Bishop's will be competitive.

"We want to run," says coach Smith, but then in the same breath the coach states "Our only drawback will be a lack of height". Smith admits that it's tough to fastbreak without the basketball, and that his Gaiters might come up a bit short in terms of players who can go up and get it.

Strong front

The Bishop frontliners will probably be Blair Shier, Ian "Mac" Maclean, and Jim Reid. On paper, the 6'6" Reid stacks up as the leading rebounder, but exhibition game statistics would seem to point toward Shier as the leader in this category. At 6'3" and 220 pounds, the former John Abbott all-star likes to throw his weight around, and averaged 17 rebounds and 20 points a game in the Gaiters' first basketball is to successfully complete its move to the top of the QUAA pack.

The consensus among opposing QUAA coaches is that McGill is the team to beat. Pick the Redmen as champs: maybe.

Concordia

Concordia coach Doug Daigneault is looking forward to an "interesting year" both for his Stinger team and the QUAA as a whole. "We're looking for the championship whenever we play," says Daigneault, but he personal reasons was a late starter this season) and forward-center Frank Zulys, 6'6", who will probably miss the first half of the season due to a knee injury. Gone from past seasons are guard John Dore and forward Bob Brix, two very consistent players who have plagued McGill in the past.

The big man?

A newcomer to watch for in the QUAA scheme of things will be John Akin, a 6'6" 230-pound graduate of Wesleyan University in the States. Daigneault is lavish in his praise of French CEGEPs, and may well have an import or two coming up from the States for the second semester assuming that the second semester is the second semester—assuming first semester.

Harold Rosenberg

"There's got to be some other way of removing a corrupt executive", commented the student.

Discussion of the Majority Report's treatment of the McGill Daily arose, with a number of Daily staff members focusing on the Majority Report's failure to embody a guarantee of editorial autonomy. Editor Larry Black asked that such a guarantee include an assurance to the paper of financial security, remarking that the Daily's role of criticizing the Students' Society Executive may invite the retaliation of a Students' Council which has the authority to cut off funds.

Speaking for the Majority, Roger Balk said he felt "that it should be impossible for the Daily budget to be manhandled by Council," and that the by-laws governing the Daily should guarantee the financial security of the Daily "within any given year." But he disagreed with Black's feeling that the paper should have the right to negotiate its budget jointly with the Students' Council.

Black countered Balk's reluctance, explaining "Last year the Daily played a big part in exposing the corruption in the Students' Society Executive. If you want that kind of free press, you can't give the people whom the paper must criticize fiscal power over it."

The CRSS will continue to hold public meetings this week to seek input from students regarding the Majority and Minority Reports. The CRSS has scheduled a vote on the proposed constitutions for November 24 and 25.

seven outings. Maclean, another Abbott grad, is more of a swingman at 6'2", but he nonetheless possesses the scoring touch (15 points a game thus far). Arnold Dolphin, Charlie Doyle, and Heinz Valenta, provide the depth at forward.

The real runner on the Bish squad is undoubtedly guard Ron Thomas. Nicknamed "Magic", Thomas, 5'11", is a graduate of Johnson State, and this fall worked out with the NBA's New York Nets. According to Smith, Thomas "will average twenty points and twelve to fifteen assists a game" and "will leave his mark on the QUAA". Teamed with Thomas in the backcourt will be either David Francis (5'10", a Dawson grad) or holdover Marty Edwards.

As a means of comparing Bishop's to McGill, one can look at the two teams' records against a common opponent, Queen's University. The Redmen and the Galters both destroyed Queen's on their home courts. At Kingston, Bish dropped a highly-disputed four point decision to the Gaels after both Shier and Maclean had fouled out.

Smith also rates McGill as the team to beat, but concedes nothing to the Redmen. "You'll be surprised," he warns. Make no mistake about it, Bishop's will be no laughing matter, and coach Smith will probably be asked to share the Rolands more than once or twice before the season is concluded.

Consider Bishop's a spoiler, and give the Galters the nod for third place.

UQTR

The Patriotes of Trois Rivières come into this season with hopes of rekindling respect for the basketball programs of Quebec's francophone schools. With the type of players that are available to coach Paul Thibaudau, such a goal is entirely attainable, and woe be to the team that takes the Patriotes as a breather on its schedule.

In recent years, Trois Rivières has been led by the ballplaying Vallerand brothers; center Andre and guard Robert. At 6'4", Andre may well be too small for the pivot position, but he nonetheless provides the Patriotes with consistent play from the center slot. His brother Robert is merely an all-star, one of the more accomplished guards in the QUAA. Unfortunately for Thibaudau and his team, Robert will probably miss the first half of the season with a severe case of mononucleosis.

With Vallerand out of the starting lineup, the guard positions will most likely be manned by the 5'11" Bertie Desrocher and the 6'0" Robert Durocher. Both are returnees from last year's squad. In the Patriotes 87-74 exhibition victory over Dawson College, Durocher contributed 24 points on a variety of medium range jump shots and hard-driving layups.

Ryan Express

In the frontcourt, Thibaudau has acquired the services of a real ace in Peter Ryan. Ryan has played for a number of teams during his career, among these being Florida A and M and Quebec's 1971 gold medal-winning representative at the Canada Games. Ryan dropped in thirty-seven points against Dawson, and was described by observers of that game as "unstoppable". Bob Comeau, the director of the Quebec Basketball Federation, feels that Ryan is capable of playing for Canada's national team.

Supporting Ryan up front will be newcomer Winston Bradshaw (thirteen points versus Dawson) and returnee Serge Lefrançois. Other names to look for in the Patriotes lineup will include Philippe Degnard, Denis Dionne, Germain Poltras, and Roch Larouche, first year players who will provide Thibaudau with improved depth on the bench.

With or without Vallerand in the lineup, Trois Rivières will be a better ballclub, being stronger up front and more mature in the backcourt than previous versions of the Patriotes. Nonetheless, the team rates in the second echelon of the QUAA, capable of upsetting either McGill or Concordia, and certainly a challenger to Bishop's for the league's third place spot.

On a hunch, figure on UQTR for fourth place, but watch out for the Patriotes and a healthy Robert Vallerand at playoff time.

Laval

This school's reputation of always being around for the playoffs may well fall by the wayside this season due to a general strike which has jeopardized its athletic program. It has been agreed upon by the various QUAA members that should the Rouge et Or be able to field a team, it would have to play at least two games against each of its league opponents in order to qualify for playoff consideration. The fourth of January is the absolute deadline for Laval—its team will either play or sit by that date.

It's difficult to get an accurate line on Laval's team with the ongoing strike, but fans can be sure that coach Bob Descheneaux has the Rouge et Or practicing somewhere (the lobby of the Chateau Frontenac perhaps????). Rumor has it that Descheneaux has recruited heavily from the

SWIMMING
As a result of the performances turned in at the McGill Bi-Meet which featured the swim teams from McGill and John Abbott College, (it was to have been a Tri-Meet, but the University of Ottawa didn't show up), a number of the members of the Redmen and Super Squaw swim teams bettered CIAU time standards and thus qualified for attendance at the Nationals at the end of the season.

For the men, Redmen team captain Chris Welch did the 50 yard freestyle in 22.3, the qualifying mark being 23.1. Welch also beat the standard for the 100 yard freestyle by half a second with a time of 49.6.

Jim Ducharme also made the mark for the 50 yard freestyle with a 22.8, while Dave Brumwell qualified in the 200 yard individual medley with a 2:03.5, nearly three seconds under the 2:06.4 standard.

For the women, Anne Cooke came in a second and a half under in the 100 yard backstroke at 1:07.6, as well as one second under in the 200 backstroke at 2:27.6. Jan Rogers also placed in the 50 freestyle with a 26.9, surpass-sing the 27.2 mark. As if it matters in terms of the competition presented, McGill outpointed John Abbott 276 to 173. Both coaches, Harry Zarins for the men and Gerry Debrule for the women were pleased with many of the times made so early in the season.

SOCCER FINAL

The CIAU National Finals in soccer were held at Molson Stadium over the weekend and the host Concordia Stingers won the title with a 2-1 overtime decision over Dalhousie University, the final match being held yesterday afternoon.

The University of British Columbia Thunderbirds beat the University of Toronto in the consolation final, also by a 2-1 score.
